A wee extra podcast this week. It starts quite positively with an audio report from the recent Celtic Graves society event which celebrated the life of Sandy McMahon. Kris of the Lostbhoys website provides the commentary and argues with himself over the number of goals Sandy scored. Next up is one for the hardcore only. Eddie and Harry show themselves to be the Waldorf and Statler of the timernet as they record their thoughts throughout the recent League cup final. After an overwhelming response from the masochists in the listenership we have relented and it's now available. It runs from about the 30th to the 1h 32nd minute so fastforward if you want to avoid reliving the horror. On the other hand if you couldn't be at Hampden it does give you a flavour of what it would be like to sit next to two bampots who think they know it all.

This week the podcast includes some added content which can be accessed by scanning the barcode on the graphic attached to the mp3. Whatever the podcast equivalent of DVD extras are then that's what you've got. You'll need to download the stickybits app for your iphone or android phone . Once you have scanned the barcode you will be able to hear the man of the moment - Stephen Smith of the Rangers Supporters Trust talking about Neil Lennon on the BBC. You can also add any content or comment you wish to the barcode and listeners across the world will be able to access it once they do a quick scan. Why not scan a picture of where you listen to the podcast or something an' 'at
