I hate watching games over the internet. The stream is never that reliable, it freezes at the most inopportune moments and the picture quality is poor but when we have the ridiculous situation of Wednesday night, the only other option is old school – listen to the radio. But really, what difference would it have made if the Celtic game HAD been available on TV. Would UEFA and the Champions League have come to an end? Sometimes the rules are ridiculous and such rules remind me of the futile efforts of Jim Farry to hold back the tide of modern TV. Games live at all times on the internet is here to stay and governing bodies need to accept it make it work for them.

This weekend I've got Celtic end tickets at Hampden – so another rubbish view of a big game then. As you know I don't do predictions for big games, so here are the odds and stats. Oh one more thing. I went for Celtic to win at 2-1 and the most common result on twitter & facebook was 3-1 so I win. Next week it's a rollover.

Before I lay out the odds for the big game on Sunday you might like to know that we have won each of the last 2 league cup encounters 2-0 with Rangers having a player sent off in each. These old firm players are terrible aren't they.
